

Klareco Communications wins at Asia-Pacific SABRE Awards 2018

Singapore, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Malaysia, Myanmar, 12 September 2018 - Klareco Communications, an award-winning strategic communications consultancy in Asia, continues to win industry recognition. The agency won the 2018 Asia-Pacific SABRE Award for best “Professional Service Firms”. The Asia-Pacific SABRE Awards is among the region’s largest PR awards programme, run by the Holmes Report.

The award recognises the success achieved for Klareco Communications, following a management buyout of the company in September 2017. Over the past year, Klareco Communications has grown from strength to strength. The agency’s growth has been focused on its three core pillars of corporate communications, financial communications and public affairs.

The agency continues to win significant mandates, particularly in complex communications issues and has also enjoyed the success of its ongoing push in the Fintech space, with an unprecedented number of clients wins in 2018. The agency also further propelled its strong crisis communications offering through new partnerships and saw fast-growth in its government and public affairs practice. It continues to strengthen its digital offering, providing strategic digital counsel to some of the leading technology brands in the world and global management consultancies.

“We are truly honoured with this recognition. It has taken real courage, resilience and determination to achieve what we have done over the past year. We would like to thank the team for their hard work, dedication and unwavering focus on excellence. We are also very grateful for the long and fruitful partnerships we have enjoyed with our clients and their ongoing support. We look forward to continuing to achieve best in class results for our clients and expanding the business further,” said Ang Shih-Huei, CEO and Mark Worthington, Managing Director, Klareco Communications.

Klareco Communications operates in five offices across Asia including the latest opening in Indonesia through its partnership agreement with Kiroyan Partners. It was nominated to be the Asia partner for the Global Communication Partners network for independent agencies earlier this year, which gives Klareco Communications the ability to service clients across the region and internationally.
